give this importance to otherwise comparatively unimportant elections.

First of all the fight now is preliminary to what is expected to be a life and death struggle for one of the parties a year hence, and every energy is being strained to get the advantage of position.

of position.

The passage of the McKinley bill, with all the dire predictions as to its effect, makes a test of popular sentiment with regard to it after it popular sentiment with regard to it after it has been in operation for a while all important, while the overwhelming defeat the republicans sustained at the last congressional election is a considerable offset to the feeling of confidence inspired by the former general victory. The significance of that defeat is yet to be fully tested. A third party has arisen to bring in a new element, the strength and influence of which has not yet been measured, and both of the old parties are in doubt as to what the consequence of the new movement will be to them. Again, there is the widest difference of opinion and a "delightful" uncertainty in both of the old parties on the currency question, and it is important to determine what part of the quesimportant to determine what part of the ques on of free comage of silver is going to play in the presidential campaign. Incidental to the currency question and the tariff question comes in that of the fiscal policy put into practice by the last Congress, represented by "liberal appropriations" from a republican point of view and by "extravagance and national bankruptcy" according to a democratic view of it.

With these issues, now defined more clearly than ever before and as yet practically untested, the two parties are approaching the na-tional campaign and it is necessary for them to begin their skirmishing a long way ahead.

Going along with these are the individual ambitions of men who seek the honor of leading their parties in the coming fight, and the selection of presidential candidates depends much upon the results of the contests are converted. upon the results of the contests now opened. THE ISSUES IN OHIO.

The result in Ohio means a great deal to both parties, because the two questions which most disturb them are both to the front. The demois personal, and he is subject to attack from three quarters—the democrats on one HEATING THE TREASURY BUILDING.—Bids were opened at the Treasury Department Saturday for heating apparatus for that building, the lowest being that of Zellers & Co. of Washington, D. C., at $5,500.

THE TELEPHONE IN COSTA RICA.—The government of Costa Rica has made a contract with Leopoldo de Rojas for the establishment and maintenance of a telephonic service between all the towns of that republic for a period of ten years. ion of a great many republicans the party made a mistake in selecting a nominee whose asso-ciation with the single question of tariff was such as to preclude all other issues. They renew public building at Norfolk, Va., the property offered by Mr. N. Burruss at the southwest corner of Atlantic and Plume streets. This is the site recommended by the treasury agents.

peat the admonition about putting all the eggs in one basket. The attitude of Mr. Sherman is in a measure an offset to this complaint and is apt to prove perplexing to the democrats, who count on opposition to the McKinley bill for

The democrats are putting forth every effort in their power to have the tariff overshadow everything. Out of thirty letters received at the democratic headquarters in this city the other day from the secretaries of various clubs other day from the secretaries of various clubs in Ohio twenty-nine asked for tariff literature, while only one made a request for documents on the silver question. The policy of the party will be to fill the state with tariff speakers and to force McKinley to defend his bill. The free-coinage democrats in the state and the leaders of the third party, who are fighting for the same thing, more or less directly, may take care of the currency question, but the work done through the national committee will re-

The opposition to Campbell in Hamilton is a thing which will figure in counting up the result, but to what extent no one can tell. The Australian ballot system is expected by the democrats to operate in their favor, but that is an assumption on theory. The fight between Sherman and Foraker for the senatorship is counted on, too, by the democrats to help their cause some. There is no doubt about the seriousness of that fight and there may be other receible candi-No Refund Can be Allowed.—The Treasury Department recently received a letter from a resident of Philadelphia requesting a refund of the duty on an unused portion of an importation of bird skins which he desires to export. Acting Secretary Spaulding has informed him that if the goods were upon importation, as is prosumed, delivered into his custody no refund of duty can be made, as the law prohibits the return of any duty on the export of merchandise after it has been removed from the custody and control of the government.

THE SITUATION IN NEW YORK. The situation in New York is one which gives the democratic leaders most annoyance. The party there is in such bad shape, as a result of rivalry among possible candidates for the presidency, that they cannot help being considerably embarrassed in the campaign for governor this fail. It is expected that Flower will be the nominee for governor, though there are all sorts of complications possible before the work of the convention is done. After that when they have their candidate in the field, there is the fear which will remain—that rivairy will lead to the knifing of the candidate lest he get too ambitious and start off as a presidential candidate. The republicans are keenly alive to the situation, expecting the rival factions to do each other and their party considerable damage. Platt and his followers are working for the legislature more than anything else and are looking a long way ahead, but they see the possibility that their candidate for governor may not fall outside the breastworks this time, though it may be nothing more than a bare possibility. The most serious trouble they anticipate within their own lines is from the opposition to Platt personally.

A large number of speakers are going to be sent through that state and through the northwest generally. In every direction they are drawing the line of battle on the McKin-ley bill, so that in every state except Pennsylvania, where local issues growing out of financial troubles that state has experienced of late will occupy attention, a preliminary skirmish on the tariff question will be had this year and upon the general results depend the presidential nominations of the two parties to a considerable extent and the conditions under which they will enter the fight next year. The loss of Ohio to the republicans this year would give them a tremendous handicap and at the same time it would probably greatly disturb the calculations of men who are ambitious for the democratic nomination.

THE FIGHT AGAINST THE LOTTERY. WORKMEN CELEBRATE Post Office Officials Think the Company Receipts Have Been Greatly Reduced

It will be a year this month since the act be-

They claim that lottery matsaid with substantial accuracy that the national committees of the two great political parties are now watching and directing the political movements over the whole country in a way they have never before done, except during a presidential campaign.

Even the campaign of Pennsylvania, where no officer higher than state treasurer and auditor general are to be elected, assumes almost a national importance. In Ohio, New York and Iowa the result is awaited with scarcely less interest than during a national campaign and the consequences of victory or defeat are regarded by the managers of both parties as potential for the future.

There are a great many things which go to give this importance to otherwise comparathe company for using the mails for the that the proposed lottery amendment to the constitution had been properly enacted by the legislature, was sent by mail over the country. Mr. Maynard also secured the arrest of the president of the Mexican company, whose head-quarters are located opposite El Paso in Mexico. The company had been in the habit of sending their mail matter over to El Paso, thus saving 3 cents on each letter, the difference between the local postage in the United States and that from Mexico to this country. The inspectors were notified, and it happened that on the very night that Mr. Maynard and an inspector were watching in the El Paso office to nab the person who brought over the lottery mail the he mail. It was usual to send some clerk across the river with the mail, but on that occasion the president was detained rather late at the office and when he was ready to go home the clerks had left. As he had some letters to mail he concluded to go over to El Paso and mail them himself. He went over and walked into the arms of the inspectors, who were really glad that he had not sent a clerk. The letters he carried were mailed and a large percentage re-turned by the persons addressed, so that the government has a large number of cases against the president. The business of this against the president. The business of this company has also suffered, Mr. Maynard says, by the operations of the anti-lottery law. Instead now of offering a capital prize of $60,000 the prize is $20,000. The Louisiana Lottery Company has also reduced the size of the capital prize by refusing to sell more than a half of any one ticket. The capital prize is therefore $150,000 instead of capital prize is therefore $150,000 instead of $300,000. Mr. Maynard considers that this

The democrats are consequently doing their best to make the tariff the main issue, while the republicans insist upon keeping the other issue well to the front.

While both parties profess confidence, and though the state is ordinarily republican, yet there is enough doubt in the situation to make both parties extremely anxious, and the third party element in the fight is one which neither can measure. The fight on Senator Sherman

Representatives of South American Republica Propose Establishing a Bureau in London. The several consuls general of the South American republics in London have inaugurated a movement for the establishment in that city of a bureau of information concerning South American affairs similar to the bureau of the American republics, which was established in this city on the recommendation of the international American conference, and a similar bureau which has recently been organized in Paris. The object of this bureau, like those in Paris and Washington, is to make known the resources and commercial advantage. known the resources and commercial advantages of the Central and South American re-publics and to furnish specific information on commercial subjects when applied for. The gentlemen who have inaugurated this movement in their announcement say:

"The advantages conferred on trade through chambers of commerce which have been established in all parts of the world are universally admitted, and there can be no question that the enormous trade which during the last fifty years has arisen between this country and the states of . Central and South America and Mexstates of Central and South America and Mexico could be still further developed if their products and requirements could be brought more directly to the notice of manufacturers by means of a chamber of commerce dedicated especially to trade interests between Great Britain and those countries."

The states proposed to be represented in the bureau are seventeen in number, viz. Argentina, Bolivia, Brazil, Chili, Colombia, Costa Rica, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, Gautemala, Honduras, Mexico, Nicaragua, Paraguay, Peru, San Salvador, Uruguay and Venezuela. The bureau will include the following departments:

of South American papers and reviews.

2. Library containing the official publications of the South and Central American governments, codes and other South American works. This library would often save merchants from incurring costs and expenses when they have legal questions in hand.

3. Commercial museums in which to exhibit the products, &c., of each of the seventeen states. These museums will contain the products already known, and also those not yet introduced to the Fredick market.

Detroit, Mich., Sept. 7.—The Labor day celebration in this city today showed a great falling off from former years, about 2,500 men being in line in the parade against 5,000 and 10,000 one and two years ago, respectively. Boston, Sept. 7.—The carrying out of the varied and extensive program arranged for Labor day has been seriously interfered with by the prevalence of a heavy northeast rainstorm, which began yesterday and has continued since, effectually preventing the proposed big procession, soaking the ball grounds so that play is impossible and causing the indefinite postponement of numerous picnics, cricket and tennis matches, foot ball games, horse races and other field sports.

turned end over end by the seas and finally settled bottom up, the water rushing through the cock-pit hatch. Though stunned and dazed he realized that some air still remained over his head at the floor of the boat, as the vessel stood upside down. Taking along breath and clearing away the cluttered contents of the cock pit from the hatch he managed to jam it open and let himself down into the water and succeeded, after an exhaustive struggle, in reaching the keel and hoisting himself on the bottom of the boat. While in this situation, with the seas breaking over him, he relinquished all hope of ever coming out of his venture alive, and resigned himself to his fate. Finally he noticed an inclination of the boat to keel as she rose on a steep wave, and as she rose on another sea he leaned way out over the sea to assist the boat in righting itself and finally succeeded with the aid of the waves in bringing her right side up again, leaving him floundering in the water. It was all he could do to get into the boat again, but he did and bailed and pumped until she was nearly freed from water.

By an agreement between the two corpora tions the telegraph company was to receive 20 per cent of the receipts of the telephone company for certain concessions. In 1883 the Western Union discovered that certain receipts were not subjected to the 20 per cent deduction and began an action for an account-ing involving seven or eight million dollars.
